Its mission is to help bring about innovation in agricultural research institutions in developing countries to increase the contribution of research to agricultural development for the poor. ISNAR identifies and advances new arrangements that promote more effective generation of new knowledge. Emphasis on institutional innovation allows ISNAR to play a catalytic role in the change processes taking place in many developing countries.

Sa mission est en effet de stimuler l'innovation au sein des institutions de recherche agricole, afin que la recherche puisse apporter une contribution plus importante au développement agricole et ainsi bénéficier aux plus démunis. L'ISNAR cherche à promouvoir la prise de dispositions nouvelles qui permettront de générer des connaissances nouvelles avec plus d'efficacité. De par son insistance sur l'innovation institutionnelle, l'ISNAR sert de catalyseur et de guide dans les processus de transformation actuellement en cours dans de nombreux pays en développement.

Fondé en 1979, l'ISNAR est une organisation à but non lucratif, dont le siège se trouve à La Haye, aux Pays-Bas mais qui opère également à partir d'antennes régionales situées à San José au Costa Rica, à Los Baños aux Philippines, à Ibadan au Nigeria, à Pretoria en République d'Afrique du Sud, et à Washington, DC, aux États-Unis.

During 2001, ISNAR poised itself for an environment where international investors in development are awakening to the failure of their past strategies, and where national governments are reconsidering their tools for alleviating poverty. The 2001 Annual Report highlights seven examples of the concentrated effort ISNAR is making to create institutional innovation through mobilizing talents in the South.

As the global agricultural environment evolves, ISNAR must constantly adapt its program of work and mode of operation. ISNAR's new MTP 2003–2005 reflects the institute's continued efforts to rethink and refocus its approach to institutional research and services, in order to make the best possible use of its resources. In 2003, ISNAR will strengthen its new programmatic structure, increasing the emphasis on decentralization of activities.

Briefing Papers

Notes informatives / Reportes informativos

ISNAR Briefing Papers are short, eight-page publications that examine policy and management issues affecting agricultural research in developing countries. They normally focus on advisory work or research recently completed or in progress at ISNAR. The target readership are research managers, policymakers, donors, and academics.

Les Notes informatives de l'ISNAR sont des publications succinctes (de huit pages) qui examinent des questions de politique ou de gestion affectant la recherche agricole dans les pays en développement. Elles portent généralement sur des travaux consultatifs ou de recherche, en cours ou venant d'être achevés. Le public cible se compose de gestionnaires de la recherche, de décideurs politiques, de bailleurs de fonds et d'universitaires.

Los Reportes informativos del ISNAR son publicaciones breves, de 8 páginas, que examinan cuestiones de políticas y gestión que afectan la investigación agrícola en los países en desarrollo. Suelen concentrarse en trabajos de asesoramiento o en investigación, en curso en el ISNAR o que acaban de concluir. Se destinan a directores de investigación, decisores en materia de políticas, donantes y académicos.

Gender and Agriculture in the Information Society

H. Hambly Odame, N. Hafkin, G. Wesseler, I. Boto

2002 / 8 pages / ISBN 1021-2310

E-format: HTML and PDF

Order code: ISNAR325

While in most developing countries women constitute the majority of the population working in agriculture, they are still being marginalized with respect to access to information and communication technologies (ICTs) for economic and social empowerment. ISNAR and the Technical Centre for Agriculture and Rural Cooperation (CTA) have formed a partnership to study the theme of gender and ICTs in agriculture and rural development and to increase the awareness of policymakers, donors, researchers, nongovernmental organizations, and farmers' organizations, of the need for dialogue and action on issues of ICT and gender in the context of food security, poverty reduction, and sustainable development. This Briefing Paper is one of the collaborative activities through which ISNAR and CTA endeavor to prepare inputs to future international deliberations.

Biotechnology and Sustainable Livelihoods—Findings and Recommendations of an International Consultation

J. Falck-Zepeda, J.I. Cohen, R. Meinzen-Dick, J. Komen

2002 / 12 pages / ISBN 1021-2310

E-format: HTML and PDF

Order code: ISNAR322

This Briefing Paper summarizes the outcome of a consultation organized by ISNAR's Biotechnology Service

(IBS) in June 2001 to examine various approaches and case-study projects relating to the assessment of the socioeconomic impact of biotechnology on the poor in developing countries. Following the introduction of the "sustainable livelihoods framework" (developed by DFID, the UK Department for International Development) as the basis for further assessments of agricultural biotechnology inputs, research scientists and representatives from participating institutions, CGIAR centers, and donor and development agencies worked together to design and develop a joint project titled "Biotechnology and Sustainable Livelihoods—Examining Risks and Benefits."

Defensive Publishing: A Strategy for Maintaining Intellectual Property as Public Goods

S. Adams, V. Henson-Apollonio

2002 / 10 pages / ISSN 1021-2310

E-format: HTML and PDF

Order code: ISNAR323

This Briefing Paper introduces the practice of defensive publication, in particular as a means for public research agricultural researchers to simultaneously communicate their results and preserve them as a public good by forestalling the patenting of the innovations they describe. The paper reviews the concept of novelty, which is at the center of the use of defensive publishing and discusses the strengths and weaknesses of the various options available for defensive publishing.

Institutional Innovations in Public Agricultural Research in Five Developed Countries

W. Janssen

2002 / 8 pages / ISSN 1021-2310

E-format: HTML and PDF

Order code: ISNAR 319

All over the world, agricultural research systems are undergoing significant changes. Using an analytical framework, this Briefing Paper describes how research systems adapt to the changes in the context of agricultural research and also, how such adjustments have affected the effectiveness of the research systems in five industrialized countries: the USA, Australia, Switzerland, the Netherlands, and the UK. Its conclusion is that the traditional “technology factories” are changing into flexible and versatile “sources of knowledge.” The transformations have not come about easily, but they have helped minimize budget cuts. The new research systems are a reflection of the new conditions that society imposes on agriculture, science, and the management of the public sector.

Evaluating Organizational Capacity Development in the Area of Planning, Monitoring, and Evaluation

R. Mackay, D. Horton

2002 / 8 pages / ISSN1021-2310

E-format: HTML and PDF

Order code: ISNAR 318

This paper describes the evaluation of a regional, multiple-site capacity-development project, undertaken to strengthen planning, monitoring, and evaluation in the field of agricultural research. It briefly discusses some of the challenges facing capacity development and its evaluation, the conceptual frameworks and methods adopted, and the procedures employed. It then presents some consolidated findings and lessons for the design, management, and evaluation of capacity-development efforts.

Planning, Implementing and Evaluating Capacity Development

D. Horton

2002 / 8 pages / ISSN1021-2310

E-format: HTML and PDF

Order code: ISNAR 317

This paper discusses 10 basic issues involved in planning, implementing, and evaluating capacity-development efforts in research and development organizations. Capacity development is the process by which individuals, groups, and organizations improve their ability to perform their functions and achieve the desired results over time. Without capacity development in research and development organizations in the South, the gap between the rich and the poor will continue to grow. Organizational capacity development can be an important vehicle for improving an organization's performance. Capacity-development efforts should be planned so that they improve those capacities that most severely hamper performance levels.

Innovaciones Institucionales en Investigación Agrícola Pública en Países Desarrollados

W. Janssen

2002 / 8 pages / ISSN1021-2310

E-format: PDF

Order code: ISNAR 314

Los sistemas de investigación agrícola en el mundo entero están sujetos a cambios muy fuertes. En este documento se describen los cambios que han tenido lugar en cinco países desarrollados, a través de un marco analítico de tres pasos: cambios en el contexto, modificaciones en los sistemas de investigación y efectos de los cambios en la efectividad de los sistemas. La conclusión es que las viejas “fábricas tecnológicas” se están convirtiendo en “fuentes de conocimiento” flexibles y versátiles. Los cambios no han sido fáciles pero han permitido frenar o parar la reducción del financiamiento. Los nuevos sistemas de investigación reflejan las nuevas condiciones que la sociedad está imponiendo a la agricultura, la ciencia y al manejo del sector público.

Listening to Stakeholders: Agricultural Research and Rural Radio Linkages

H. Hambly Odame, A. Kassam

2002 / 6 pages / ISSN1021-2310

Order code: ISNAR 312

In October 2000, ISNAR, along with partners in Africa and Canada, initiated a project to investigate the linkages between agricultural research and rural radio. Its concern was how to develop a working relationship between researchers and broadcasters that would foster a two-way exchange of knowledge with farmers. The initial focus of the study being sub-Saharan Africa, a workshop was held in Ghana, in March 2001, to assess training needs and organizational constraints. This Briefing Paper presents the main results of the workshop. Top priority was attributed to training in facilitating partnerships between research and radio, and in mobilizing financial resources for collaborative activities.

M. A. McLean, R. J. Frederick, P. Traynor, J.I. Cohen, J. Komen

2002 / 12 pages / ISSN1021-2310

E-format: PDF

Order code: ISNAR 311

In July 2001, ISNAR convened an expert consultation to launch the development of a conceptual framework for addressing biosafety regulatory implementation and capacity-building needs of developing countries. This Briefing Paper describes the five-element framework for national biosafety-system implementation that emerged. This framework (1) clarifies critical decision points in the development or improvement of a national biosafety system; (2) systematically examines choices among policy options; and (3) delineates some of the scientific social dimensions of these options. It aims to complement ongoing regional and global projects that facilitate the development of national biosafety guidelines and frameworks.

Order code: ISNAR 310

Genetic resources can play an important role in achieving the increases in food supplies necessitated by the rapid growth of the world population. One way of strengthening the ability to use these resources is to improve the on-the-job performance of program leaders and scientists working in the relevant fields. Based on the draft report titled "Training Needs and Organizational Constraints Assessment. Human Resource Development for Genetic Resource Managers," this Briefing Paper describes a training-needs assessment held to ensure that a forthcoming training module will meet the specific needs of program leaders.

Country Reports

ISNAR Country Reports describe, analyze, and diagnose (parts of) national agricultural research systems and make recommendations how these systems can be strengthened. They may be commissioned by client governments, and are targeted at senior officials in ministries of Agriculture, leaders of national agricultural research systems and institutes, and donors.

Les Rapport de pays de l'ISNAR décrivent et analysent des systèmes nationaux de recherche agricole (ou des composantes de ces systèmes) afin d'établir un diagnostic et proposer des recommandations visant leur renforcement. Ils sont parfois commandés par les gouvernements des pays clients et s'adressent surtout aux cadres supérieurs des ministères d'agriculture, aux directeurs des systèmes et des instituts nationaux de recherche agricoles et aux bailleurs de fonds.

Los Informes sobre países describen y analizan los sistemas de investigación agrícola nacionales (o partes de ellos), elaboran diagnósticos sobre ellos y hacen recomendaciones relativas a la forma de reforzarlos. Pueden pedirlos los gobiernos de los países clientes; se destinan a funcionarios superiores de los ministerios de agricultura, líderes de los sistemas e institutos de investigación agrícola nacional así como donantes.

The Agricultural Innovation System of Azerbaijan: An Assessment of Institutional Linkages

T. Temel, W. Janssen, F. Karimov

2002 / 57 pages / ISBN 1023-9394

Order code: ISNAR 315

Since independence in 1991, Azerbaijan has had to contend with severe adverse developments, including civil unrest, the dismantlement of inter-republic trade links, and economic blockade by its neighbors. The country's efforts to build institutions and establish markets with proper infrastructure are slowly progressing, and greater attention is being given to Azerbaijan, because of its rich oil reserves. However, rural development in general, and agriculture in particular, have been neglected. New private-sector farmers are practicing subsistence farming and experiencing declining productivity and incomes. Poverty has become widespread. Agricultural innovation is necessary to help the agricultural sector escape from this vicious circle. This Country Report provides insights into the workings of the current agricultural innovation system (AIS), pinpoints its weaknesses, and identifies areas that need to be strengthened.

Analysis of a National Biosafety System: Regulatory Policies and Procedures in Argentina

M. Burachik, P. Traynor

E-format: PDF

Order code: ISNAR 313

Biosafety is achieved by assessing and managing the environmental and health risks of new technologies, by weighing potential benefits against potential threats and negative consequences. During the past decade, national biosafety systems have become an increasingly important mechanism to ensure the safe use of biotechnology products, i.e. a means of avoiding unacceptable risks to human health or the environment and of lifting unintended constraints to technology transfer. This Country Report presents a review and analysis of the biosafety system in Argentina and assesses its impact on the commercialization of genetically modified organisms. Findings and recommendations in the report may serve as the basis for discussions to strengthen Argentina's biosafety system and adapt it as required by the changing context of biotechnology products. They may also play a role in advancing efforts to improve public acceptance, technology transfer, and regulatory harmonization.

Workshop on a Collaborative Platform for Agricultural Research in Sub-Saharan Africa (held at WARDA, Bouaké, March 14–16, 2001)

ISNAR/WARDA

2001 / 29 pages / ISBN 92-9113-229-2

Order code: ISNAR 309

The workshop on a collaborative platform for agricultural research in sub-Saharan Africa was held to develop a framework for the creation of more productive partnerships that will maximize the advantages and efficiency gains of collaboration. Participants represented the CGIAR (WARDA and ISNAR), the African Association of Universities, and the academic community of 12 eastern, western, central, and southern African countries. For partnerships to be successful, the partners must share a vision and have common goals, objectives (strategic and specific), values, and principles; the advantages of collaborative partnership must be clear to all and partners must demonstrate genuine understanding of the constraints faced by each of the parties. The workshop led to the recognition that the original concept of a collaborative platform involving only the CGIAR centers and the universities was too narrow and that other partners were needed. This report summarizes the discussions and records the main results of the workshop.

Learning about Capacity Development through Evaluation. Perspectives and Observations from a Collaborative Network of National and International Organizations and Donor Agencies

Edited by D. Horton

2001 / 52 pages

Order code: ISNAR 306

This publication is based on a midterm review and synthesis workshop for the project Evaluating Capacity Development in Research and Development Organizations, held during July 2001. This project seeks to contribute to the effectiveness of capacity-development efforts in research and development organizations through the use of evaluation. The workshop report reviews project participants' experiences in evaluating their own capacity development efforts. It presents emerging lessons regarding capacity development and its evaluation and identifies major constraints to the greater use of evaluation. It also suggests future activities for the project and the participating organizations. For further information see the Evaluating Capacity Development (ECD) website: <http://www.isnar.cgiar.org/ecd/>

Meeting the Challenge of Ecoregional Research. An International Workshop on Organizing and Managing Ecoregional Programs, Wageningen, The Netherlands 26–28 March 2001

ISNAR

2001 / 48 pages

Order code: ISNAR 302

In the early 1990s, the CGIAR launched the Ecoregional Programs (ERP) to improve the management of natural resources in collaboration with national and regional partners. The programs focus on specific ecological and geopolitical regions, attributing equal importance to production, natural resource management, and social equity. Three studies and a workshop were organized to advance thinking and practice in the organization and management of ERPs and draft an analytical description of seven ERPs. ERP managers in the CGIAR and national R&D organizations were asked to share their views on organizational and management issues. Workshop discussed the results of this survey and identified strengths and weaknesses in the organization and management of ecoregional programs. Lessons were drawn on how to improve future ERPs.

Globalization and the Developing Countries: Emerging Strategies for Rural Development and Poverty Alleviation

Edited by D. Bigman

2002 / 352 pages / ISBN 0-85199-575-6

Order code: ISNAR 321

The globalization process and the internal policy reforms that the developing countries have implemented during the past decade have changed the relative prices of practically all their inputs and outputs. Agricultural producers have therefore been forced to change the structure and methods of their production.

The objective of this book is to review the impact of globalization on a number of issues. These include the effects of changes in global trading rules and regulations, the removal of trade barriers and the elimination of many country-specific and commodity-specific trade agreements, on the economies of developing countries in general and their agricultural sectors in particular. The book will be of interest to those in the fields of agricultural and development economics.
